#266 Fire! What Will They Do? – Basic

3:45 to 4:45 p.m. – Thursday, March 29

Studies show that building occupants behave differently than anticipated during an evacuation process. Occupants may be slow to respond, rely on close and familiar exit routes and fail to proceed to a designated meeting place. This session will explain how to develop an emergency evacuation plan which accounts for the human behavior you may witness during an evacuation. You'll also learn to practice an evacuation plan in a manner which accommodates these differences in behavior. You will be able to describe ways to develop a facility evacuation plan; identify a safe and appropriate meeting place for facility occupants; and describe how to properly account for facility occupants during an emergency.
