

Erin Rosiello

Regional Business Development Manager

Erin Rosiello is the regional business development manager for Southwestern Ohio. As an ambassador for CEO/Administrator Steve Buehrer, she works with communities and businesses on a variety of workers' compensation issues.

Her duties include helping business and community organizations as well as individual employers understand BWC programs and services, and demonstrating how those services can help employers improve workplace safety and reduce premium costs.

Erin has more than 25 years of experience assisting employers in the private sector. Her background includes business-to-business sales, generating revenue growth and driving marketing initiatives, sales management and training. She's been recognized for her ability to build, guide and sustain successful sales teams within highly competitive industries.

She has had a diverse career, including 20 years in radio, television and advertising and eight years consulting Ohio employers on human resources issues such as workers' comp, payroll processing, unemployment cost containment and HRIS systems. Erin has been a guest speaker throughout Southwest Ohio, educating and updating various civic and professional organizations.

She is also an active member in a number of civic and professional organizations, including the Rotary Club of Cincinnati East Side, and the Greater Cincinnati Human Resource Association. Erin holds a Bachelor of Arts in business from Muskingum University in New Concord Ohio.
